ABOUT THIS BIBLIOGRAPHY

This bibliography is my collection, annotation and contribution to the growing mass of literature on the New Perspective on Paul (NPP). It is by no means an exhaustive collection, although I hope it is far more extensive than the average bibliography you'll find at the end of lecture notes or even at the back of a textbook. There are works that could appear under three or four different headings (esp. when they deal with Luther, Law, Justification and Judaism rolled into one!). I have tried to stratify the various monographs and articles in a thematic way, but some works could easily overlap under different headings. I have also cited only a handful of materials available on the internet and I limited my selection to works which I deem to be significant to the on-going debate. A fuller referencing of electronic materials is conveniently catalogued on the 'Paul Page'. My thanks to Mark Mattison for posting this bibliography on his webpage and I hope it benefits students and scholars alike.

ANTECEDENTS TO SANDERS

C. G. Montefiore, Judaism and St. Paul: Two Essays (New York: Dutton, 1915). The Judaism that Paul knew was a cold form of Diaspora Judaism and not Rabbinic Judaism.

G. F. Moore, "Christian Writers on Judaism," HTR 14 (1921): 197-254. Moore supposed that Christian writers are influenced by an apologetic desire to see in Judaism the antithesis to grace.

G. F. Moore, Judaism in the First Centuries of the Christian Era (2 vols.; Harvard: HUP, 1927).

W. D. Davies, Paul and Rabbinic Judaism: Some Rabbinic Elements in Pauline Theology (4th ed.; Philadelphia: Fortress, 1980 [1948]).

Samuel Sandmel, The Genius of Paul: A Study in History (New York: Farrar, Straus and Cudahy, 1958).

H. J. Schoeps, Paul: The Theology of the Apostle in the Light of Jewish Religious History (Philadelphia: Westminster, 1961).

Preston M. Sprinkle, "The Old Perspective on the New Perspective: A Review of Some 'Pre-Sanders' Thinkers," Themelios 30 (2005): 21-31. Highlights antecedents to Sanders in works by G.F. Moore, K. Stendahl, George Howard, Joseph Tyson and N.A. Dahl.

Krister Stendahl, "The Apostle Paul and the Introspective Conscience of the West," HTR 56 (1963): 199-215; repr. in Paul among Jews and Gentiles (London: SCM, 1976), 76-96. The seminal article where Stendahl urges that Paul had a 'robust conscience' and did not wrestle with feelings of personal guilt like Augustine and Luther.

WORKS BY E.P. SANDERS

E.P. Sanders, "Patterns of Religion in Paul and Rabbinic Judaism: A Holistic Method of Comparison," HTR 66 (1973): 455-78.

E.P. Sanders, "The Covenant as a Soteriological Category and the Nature of Salvation in Palestinian and Hellenistic Judaism," in Jews, Greeks and Christians, eds. Robert Hamerton Kelly and Robin Scroggs (Leiden: Brill, 1976), 11-44.

E. P. Sanders, Paul and Palestinian Judaism: A Comparison in Patterns of Religion (London: SCM, 1977). The ground-breaking book by Sanders where he proposes his view of Palestinian Judaism as covenantal nomism: "Covenantal nomism is the view that one's place in God's plan is established on the basis of the covenant and that the covenant requires as the proper response of man his obedience to its commandments, while providing means of atonement for transgression" (p. 75); "The 'pattern' or 'structure' of covenantal nomism is this: (1) God has chosen Israel and (2) given the law. The law implies (3) God's promise to maintain the election and (4) the requirement to obey. (5) God rewards obedience and punishes transgression. (6)

The law provides for means of atonement, and atonement results in (7) maintenance or re-establishment of the covenantal relationship. (8) All those who are maintained in the covenant by obedience, atonement and God's mercy belong to the group which will be saved. An important interpretation of the first and last points is that election and ultimately salvation are considered to be God's mercy rather than human achievement" (p. 422).

E.P. Sanders, "On the Question of Fulfilling the Law in Paul and Rabbinic Judaism," in Donum Gentilicum: New Testament Studies in Honour of David Daube, eds. C.K. Barrett, E. Bammel and W.D. Davies (Oxford: Clarendon, 1978), 103-26.

E.P. Sanders, "Paul's Attitude Toward the Jewish People," USQR 33 (1978): 175-87.

E. P. Sanders, Paul, the Law, and the Jewish People (Fortress: Philadelphia, 1983).

E.P. Sanders, Paul (Oxford: OUP, 1991).

Michael F. Bird, "When the Dust Finally Settles: Reaching a Post New Perspective Perspective," Criswell Theological Review (forthcoming 2005). Bird argues that Judaism was variegated and some strands emphasized grace and others obedience. Merit theology (of some kind) does provide the backdrop for Paul's formulation of law and justification. However, Paul's primary problem was not confronting legalism but trying to get Gentiles accepted as Gentiles by Jews into fellowship.

Michael F. Bird, "Justification as Forensic Declaration and Covenant Membership: A Via Media between Reformed and Revisionist Readings of Paul," (forthcoming in Tyndale Bulletin). This article contends that justification includes God's declaration of righteousness for believers and the inclusion of Gentiles into the people of God. Paul confronts an "ethnocentric nomism" and espouses a view of justification whereby God "creates a new people with a new status in a new covenant as a foretaste of the new age".

Brendan Byrne, "Interpreting Romans Theologically in a Post-'New Perspective' Perspective," HTR 94 (2001): 227-41. Byrne considers himself within the NPP but still thinks that the NPP is theologically impoverished since it fails to adequately reckon with the intense exploration of human sin and alienation from God in the early part of Romans.

Campbell thinks that these works are significant but fail to abolish or refute the primary contentions of the NPP.

N. T. Wright, "The Paul of History and the Apostle of Faith," TynBul 29 (1978): 61-88 Synopsis: The debate between E Käsemann and K Stendahl about justification and salvation history may be resolved with the help of a new overall view of Pauline theology. For Paul, the messiah represents his people, so that a crucified messiah means a crucified Israel. This provides Paul with his critique of Israel, aimed not at "works-righteousness" but at "national righteousness". Paul has been distorted by various schools of NT criticism: this view combines their strong points while avoiding their weaknesses.

He raises three main points: (1) If legalism means that keeping the law affects eschatological salvation, then covenantal nomism is legalistic nomism by definition. (2) Covenantal nomism is a synergistic nomism. (3) Sanders reduces soteriology to the categories of sociology.

"Although people nowadays are fond of asserting otherwise, no one understood the real essence of Pauline theology, the salvation given sola gratia, by faith alone, better than Augustine and Martin Luther. Despite this rigorous reversal of all previous values and ideals (Phil 3.7-11), Pauline theology – and therefore also Christian theology – remains very closely bound up with Jewish theology. Its individual elements and thought-structure derive almost exclusively from Judaism. This revolutionary change becomes visible precisely in the fact that its previous theological views remain present even in their critical reversal as a negative foil, and help to determine the location of the new position." Rather than being polemically motivated, or being precipitated in response to either legalistic or nationalistic tendencies, Paul's concern with the law was thus driven by primeval considerations.

Laato recognizes Sanders' contribution of undoing the caricature of Judaism as "legalism" but criticizes Sanders on various points: (1) Sanders fails to adequately appropriate the late nature of rabbinic materials; (2) Sanders does not recognize the difference between Paul and Judaism as being Paul's pessimistic outlook on the human condition; and (3) Sanders is effectively arguing for a concept of "normative Judaism" which did not exist in the first-century (see esp. 65-82).

Thomas R. Schreiner, Romans (BECNT; Grand Rapids, MI: Baker, 1998). The draw back of this commentary is that in a subsequent work (Paul Apostle of God's Glory in Christ) Schreiner has changed his mind from a transformative understanding of justification to a strictly forensic view.

Charles H. Talbert, Romans (Macon: Smyth and Helwys, 2002).

Ben Witherington, Romans: A Socio-Rhetorical Commentary (Grand Rapids, MI: Eerdmans, 2004). The excursus on "A Closer Look: Righteousness in the LXX, Early Judaism and Paul" (pp. 52-54) and "A Closer Look: 'Justified' and Concepts of Covenantal Nomism" (pp. 102-7) are useful and represent a middle ground in regard to faith and obedience.

Authors hyperlinked in the site range in stature from established scholars to amateurs. This is probably the best website for the NPP to date and is becoming frequently cited in books and articles.

Mark Goodacre (Webmaster). "New Testament Gateway." <http://www.ntgateway.com/>. By far the best New Testament resource site on the web. Goodacre's link to Pauline studies has a good selection of on-line Pauline publications available including those relevant to the NPP. The site is regularly updated and it contains exclusively scholarly contributions.
